Fixing

Fixing HTML and CSS codes are necessary when building any web project.

Debugging is partly technical and partly intuitive process that's only mastered with practice. As you work on more projects, fixing and debugging will become more obvious.

When debugging, the first thing you need to do is to check for syntax errors.

```

    <title>title of the HTML page</title>
  </head>
  <body>
    <h1>Hello, World!</h1>
    This is your first paragraph!

What's next?

There are two things that you should know about website management:

- Every website must have a `domain name`;
- In order to make your website accessible on the Internet, you must use web hosting services.

To host your website you need to have a zip file of website. Inside the zip folder has to be two files. One of them - `index.html` which is the most common name used for default page and `style.css` which is visual design of the website page.

Use this step-by-step guide how to host your website using 000webhost and make it accessible for everyone
